Report on

MEMBERSHIP

RECOGNIZING that the Council's vitality depends fundamentally on the quality of its membership, the Membership Committee continues to seek a diverse and representative body of members. Since the early 1970s, the Committee has functioned under a set of procedures and guidelines derived from a comprehensive analysis of the Council's membership which is up-dated continuously. The Committee shapes its decisions with due regard for the occupation, age, and geographical balance of the membership, as well as a special concern for incorporating the broadest possible spectrum of views on important issues. As the Council's Studies Program has moved into new areas of growing importance for the last quarter of the twentieth century, the Membership Committee has attempted to select members with expertise and experience relevant to the new issues. A measure of the Committee's recent efforts is the fact that 37% of the present membership has been elected during the last five years.

Although the Committee faces extremely difficult decisions in selecting among the many highly qualified candidates for membership, it has taken particular satisfaction in recommending an increasing number of younger men and women for Term Membership. The Term Membership program, initiated in 1970, now admits up to twenty members under 31 years of age for five-year terms in the Council. Originally limited to ten members a year, the Term Membership program's expansion reflects its value as a means of insuring the participation of outstanding young professionals in the Council's program. Term Members are currently drawn from both the public and the private sectors, and from a great variety of professions and institutions. In addition to their contributions to the general meetings of the Council, Term Members have played notable roles in numerous Council study groups and in the work of the 1980s Project.

During 1976-77, the Membership Committee met twice to review the candidacies of several hundred individuals. In the course of the year, Paul C. Warnke resigned as Chairman of the Committee following his appointment as Director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and the President's Chief Negotiator for SALT. Nicholas deB. Katzenbach assumed the Chairmanship and Arthur J. Taylor continued to serve as Vice Chairman. The Term Membership Committee held one meeting, with Guido Goldman chairing its deliberations for the third year. Acting on the recommendations of these committees, the Board of Directors issued its invitations to membership in the Council. As of August 31, 1977, 132 persons have become members of the Council during this reporting period. Twenty-two women were elected, bringing to 92 the number of women elected to membership since they became eligible in 1970.

During 1976-77, the following men and women became members:

As of August 31, 1977, the Council had a total of 1,786 members, representing a growth of 61 members as compared with the previous year. Of these, 748 are resident in New York, 462 live in the Boston and Washington areas, and the remaining 576 reside elsewhere in the United States or overseas. Broadly categorizing the membership, the Council now has the following profile:

Profession	Number of Members
Scholars or academic administrators	376
Business executives	500
U.S. Government officials	275
Lawyers	171
Journalists, correspondents, and communications executives	159
Administrators of non-profit institutions	219
Other	86
Total	1,786

In connection with the infusion of new members into the Council, a systematic attempt is underway to involve them actively in Council activities. The Council administration draws on membership questionnaires to assess the principal interests and backgrounds of each member as an aid in constructing study and discussion groups. Furthermore, in order to facilitate wider participation in Council meetings, a number of groups have begun to meet in Washington, as well as at the Harold Pratt House. Some ad hoc weekend meetings have made possible the participation of a number of members otherwise unable to take part in Council sessions. The Council will continue to experiment with different formats and locations in order to engage the widest possible range of members in the life and work of the Council.

The Membership Committee depends on members of the Council to provide a steady flow of outstanding nominees for consideration. It invites members to advance nominations on their own initiative and to discuss individual candidacies with the Director of Membership Affairs.

Cover photographs: Doorway and door knocker of the Harold Pratt House. This residence in the English Renaissance style was designed by Wm. Adams Delano and built in 1919. Harriet Barnes Pratt gave the house to the Council on Foreign Relations in 1945, in memory of her husband, Harold Irving Pratt, a Council member from 1923 to 1939.

The Annual Report was designed by the Joseph del Gaudio Design Group Inc.
