

HOLOGRAPHIC PROJECTION DECEPTION

A highly secret unit of the U.S. Military and the National Reconnaissance Office, NRO, has developed holographic projection.

Figure 1 Supposed "ISS" 250 miles away. This could easily be a holographic projection from automated ground stations with sodium layer lasers or other technology.

That is, in simple terms, images of supposed moving and flying devices are inserted in the skies and clouds, or upon the same. Most every eyewitness would swear under oath, that they saw a real "thing". An "enemy" army can be ordered to surrender by a Deity speaking to them from a cloud (by holographic magic) ordering them to lay down their arms.

One of the biggest secrets of the NRO is the "Crop Circle Syndrome".

Ornate designs suddenly show up on farms in various parts of the world. Since the designs are so intricate, many UFO book-writers theorize that some off-the-planet forces are doing it. And, presumably, these forces are ETs. Yes, it is off-the-planet, okay, but not ETs. Rather, the NRO is in charge of the super-secret satellites and other forms of machinery, that have super-duper laser, particle beam, and other so far unlabeled technology. So greatly ahead of any published sources, these devices are more or less generally unknown. And, the mechanisms operate beyond the human-visible and sometimes even machine-visible spectrum. In plain terms, these machines tattoo the earth.

With the Soviets no longer the great bogeyman, the ruling families, to further cow and control ordinary Americans, and other common people worldwide, have a Plan B, already in progress. Hollywood, always tied to the Pentagon and the war-mongers, has long-since helped this Plan with stories about Unidentified Flying Objects, UFOs, real, or otherwise. A long-time secret project has been anti-gravity machines. A small belated admission has come out from Boeing. Interesting, that they refer to the Boeing division, as the Phantom Works. "Boeing challenges the laws of physics", Financial Times, 7/29/02

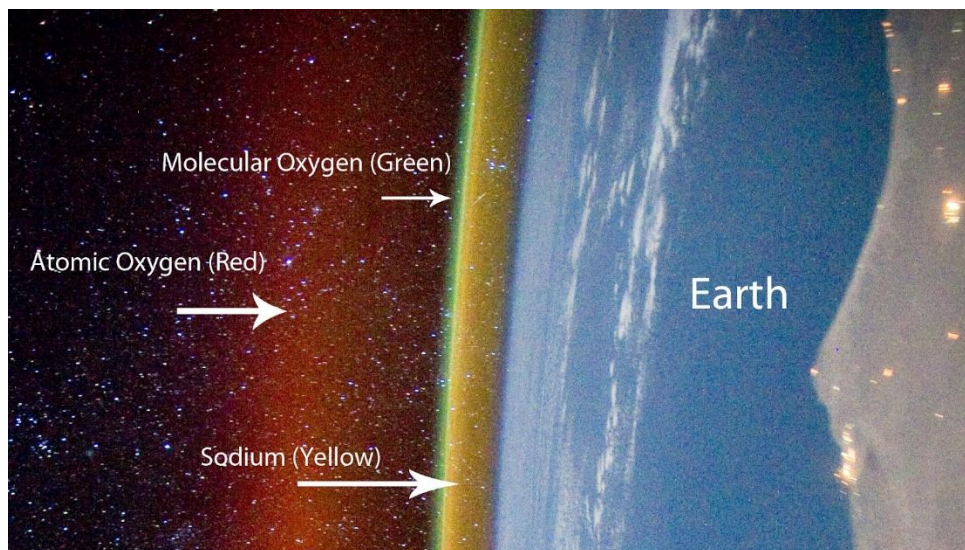

Not mentioned are the secret anti-gravity machine projects of the Fermi Labs, an adjunct of Rockefeller's University of Chicago.

For a fake alien invasion they could easily just project "space" ships over cities. They used Clarks script for "satellites" which are just a euphemism for undersea cables, radio spectrum and other technologies. Clarke was a british-israelist and judeao-mason as well as a pedophile. They may even have real "saucers" using Tesla and other peoples work. Aliens could easily simply be genetically modified beings. All of this would be presented on TV as fact, no outsiders would be permitted up close access to any of the elements of the hoax. Examples are Antarctica which only under supervision at high cost, "normal" people visit for short periods of time on some beach. Has any independent repeatable group of people ever had access to space? This is just an opera tv production, it's not real.

Controlling satellites for military, media, and communications purposes, has been the NRO. Until several years ago, it was forbidden for the monopoly press to even confirm the existence of the NRO. A huge super-secret facility near the Capitol has been built for NRO costing more than 300 million dollars. This, without members of Congress on any budget committee knowing of the project or at least, denying that they know. [A story for another time is how key members of the House and the Senate are stooges for the secret political police.]

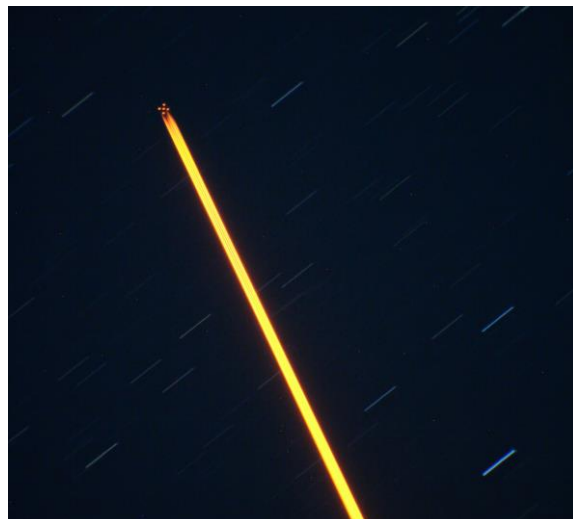

Examples of NRO secrets include their satellite imaging. Their satellites view practically every blade of grass near the CIA headquarters in Virginia. Near that location is the Civil War historic site, Ft. Marcy Park. That is where the body was found of Clinton White House Deputy Counsel Vincent. W. Foster, Jr. He supposedly was a "suicide". All along, the NRO has proof, by satellite imaging, of his murder and removal, how his body was moved by identifiable persons from in or near the White House parking lot to be dumped near some Civil War cannons in Ft. Marcy Park. To confuse matters, the location is right across the road from the mansion of the Saudi Ambassador to the U.S., raising questions about him and his aids. Did they see or hear anything? As a cover up, a key NRO official, as to satellite imaging, Daniel Potter, was murdered in recent years.

One of the biggest secrets of the NRO is the "Crop Circle Syndrome". Ornate designs suddenly show up on farms in various parts of the world. The purpose? Plan B. Since the Moscow government is no longer our "enemy" (if they ever really were), then earthlings have to be controlled, to deal with "enemies" from some faraway galaxy. "Enemies" or "Friends" supposedly sending us some kind of messages elegantly embroidered in the earth. With a financial collapse expected, these methods of controlling the populace are even more strategic and urgent.

I fully expect "crop circle" magazine and book publishers to start screaming against us for raising this issue, which operates to the detriment of their publishing profits and "prophets". By the way, about nine years ago our weekly one-hour public access Cable TV Show, "Broadsides", dared discuss an early version of the Plan B scenario. As we then stated, the plan was created to deal with expected financial collapse, by controlling the population, the easiest way, with vast superstitions and such, in the absence of the Moscow "enemies". One well-informed scientist, who would not allow us to use his name, did confirm our basic contentions. If ever we re-name our website, perhaps we should call it "Ahead of the Parade", which we have been for more than forty years, with the jeopardy and rewards of plusses and minuses. –Sherman Skolnick "greatest secrets".

MIND CONTROL USING HOLOGRAPHY AND DISSOCIATION: A PROCESS MODEL.

By

Murray Gillin Ph.D. Loris Gillin M. Ed (Psych), and Deva Paul

March 2000

ABSTRACT:

The theory of holography as applied to the universe and to the functioning of the mind, sight and hearing is considered as a means to better understand dissociation. Using a case study, a process model of mind control is developed which describes how mind control can be created and expanded between controller and subject. Nine propositions are specified to motivate and guide future empirical investigations.

INTRODUCTION:

Ritual abuse literature (Blood 1994, Noblett and Peskin 1995, Ross 1995, Ryder 1992) highlights the application of dissociation practices to achieve programming of subjects and the maintaining of mind control over the actions and loyalty of the abused. Ridell (1994), in a report of the Los Angeles County Commission for Women states, “despite detailed evidence of ritual abuse coming from child victims and their families, and from the professionals working with them, and despite the remarkable consistency of these reports both nationally and internationally, society at large resists believing that ritual abuse really occurs.” The Los Angeles report referred to above also makes clear that mind control is the cornerstone of ritual abuse and the key element in the subjugation and silencing of witnesses – “mind control is achieved through an elaborate system of brain-washing programming, indoctrination hypnosis and the use of various mind-altering drugs.”

A corollary of this abuse and mind control in the abused person is the process of dissociation, a condition related to the creation of multiple personalities and known as Dissociative Identity Disorder (D.I.D) and described in DSM-IV, (1994). Tertiary dissociation, as described by Van der Kolk, McFarlane and Weisbath (1996), occurs “when people develop distinct ego states that contain the traumatic experience, consisting of complete identities with distinct cognitive, affective and behavioural patterns.” The traumatic memories “for individuals who dissociate, do so not because of active repression, but rather because their mental capacities are weakened by “vehement emotions,” which impair their ability to integrate mental contents. The traumatised (abused) individual is incapable of integrating the memory of the trauma (abuse) into personal consciousness.” (Van der Kolk et al 1996). Nemiah (1995),(Van der Kolk et al 1996b) believes it is important to pay attention to the role of dissociation, since he views the study of dissociation as “critical for reviving an appreciation of the importance of unconscious mental processes and their role in the pathogenesis of psychiatric disorders.” In summary, the “body keeps the score with the trauma, being stored in somatic memories and expressed as changes in biological stress responses” (Van der Kolk, 1994).

Such traumatic abuse practices are usually deliberate and can be shown to evolve over time in both intensity and technical sophistication. Gillin, Gillin and Paul (1997 a) have chronicled the evolution of such abuse practices by an organisation committed to using dissociation as a primary instrument to achieve control of individuals behaving in a ‘robotic’ manner. Gillin, Gillin and Paul (1997 b) show the direct relationship between the use of traumatic physical abuse and abuse administered through experimental and scientific research and advanced technological applications to create dissociated personalities and interconnect these fragments of the person to respond to ‘triggers’ and programmed signals. Memory for detail of this induced trauma appears to be boundless (Ross, 1996).

Karl Pribram, a neuro surgeon was involved in research on how the brain processed memory. Based on research by Lashley (1950), Pribram (1969) noted that no matter what portion of the rats’ brain was cut out, Lashley could not eradicate their memories. Similar experimentation showed that removing as much as 90% of a rat’s visual cortex or 98% of a cat’s optic nerve did not seriously impair its ability to perform complex visual tasks (Pribram 1969). He also noted that humans with portions of their brain removed never suffered loss of specific memories. Indeed, when large sections of the brain were removed, hazy memories were observed but no one ever came out of surgery with any selective memory loss. Pribram realised that any small piece of a holographic film contains all the information recorded in the whole and was precisely the mechanism for recording information in the brain. This suggested that the brain was using some kind of internal hologram, so that only a small piece of the hologram could still reconstruct the whole of what the eyes were seeing. Pribram claimed memories are encoded holographically.

Based on later research, Pribram (1991) recognised that the electrical communications that take place in the brain do not occur alone between nerve cells, or neurons but between large groups of neurons firing repeatedly, in-step and at the same frequency and exhibiting coherence as with laser light (Horgan 1999). Neurons are packed closely together so that the electrical message moves through like an expanding ripple of electricity-- a wave-like phenomena--and are constantly criss-crossing on another and producing an interferogram. It is this almost endless and kaleidoscopic array of interference patterns that gives the brain its holographic properties. Talbot (1991) shows that the above theory can explain; the vastness of our memory; ability to recall and forget, associative memory, recognise familiar things, photographic memory, transference of learned skills, phantom limb sensations.

Today new developments in brain-imaging techniques permit the establishment of the correlations of brain function (eg. dissociation) with psychodynamic processes. Recent positron emission tomography (P.E.T.), (Rauch et al 1996) showed that 'when DID patients are exposed to stimuli reminiscent of their trauma there is an increase in perfusion of the areas of the right hemisphere associated with emotional states and autonomic arousal, while there is a simultaneous decrease in oxygen utilization in Brocca's area, the region in the left hemisphere responsible for generating words to attach to internal experience.' (van der Kolk 1997)

In a study of E.E.G. abnormalities Teicher et al (1997) found an association between trauma-abuse history and neurological abnormalities. Such findings in the context of early-life trauma has direct application to investigating D.I.D. Hopper et al (1999), using measures of the difference of average E.E.G. alpha coherence, found no significant differences between D.I.D. participants, actors and acted alters, however significant differences were found between D.I.D. host and alter personalities at frontal, central, parietal and temporal regions of the cortex. E.E.G. alpha coherence is judged to be an objective measure of neuronal cortical connectivity and hence D.I.D. psychodynamic processes.

Based on extensive case study research, Gillin et al (1997 b) have identified the presence of large levels of electromagnetic energy around the controlled subject and some circumstantial evidence to argue that direct behavioural control of the dissociated person is through an implanted "chip". This chip is positioned behind the left ear. The concept of implants is not new. As early as the late 1950's, Jose Delgado showed that by stimulating a correctly positioned "stimociever" within an individuals cranium an outside operator can wield a surprising degree of control over the subjects performance (Delgado 1969). Delgado also writes "radio stimulation of different points in the amygdala and hippocampus in the four patients produced a variety of effects including sensations, elation, deep thoughtful concentration, odd feelings, super relaxation, coloured visions, and other responses" (Delgado 1973).

Delgado certainly saw the potential application of his work and the clear association with remotely induced hallucination and behaviour. He even prophesied a day when brain control could be turned over to human operators by establishing two-way radio communications between the implanted brain and computers (Delgado 1969). Such electronic stimulation of the brain can be programmed to effect mind sensations and hence behaviour (Thomas, 1989), (Olds, 1962). An examination of the extension of these pioneering experiments and their application in the U.S.A. Defence and Intelligence services is provided by Cannon (1995). Cometta (in Andrews 1993), in discussing the research at Pine-Gap, claims that staff "earmarked for duty on the EMP project, have undergone brain-washing and even implantation of intracranial devices". Also Bowart (1995) has completed an historical time-line of mind control experimentation by the USA government from 1940 to 1995. In a prime example of investigative reporting Ross, (1996), has integrated the results of F.O.I. documents, Government enquiries, declassified CIA and Military reports, research contract funding, published papers in journals and personal letters, with both C.I.A. and military mind control experimental programs. Of major significance is that many leading academic and medical psychiatric and psychological researches were funded through foundations with proven links to the CIA and Military. Ross (1996) has proved beyond any reasonable doubt that the U.S. Government had been using M.P.D. and Manchurian candidates operationally since World War II. He has also established the involvement of the Government in the use of hallucinogenic drugs for mind control and development of so-called temporal lobe epilepsy theory to account for dissociation. Ross says this is 'misinformation and DID is iatrogenic.

In a recent novel "Apocalypse Watch", Ludlum (1995) relates the development of post World War Two Nazi research on implanted chips in which a central character in the story is controlled by an early version of a implanted "chip" in the head. Similarly the evolution of Hollywood science-fiction movies such as "Johnny Mnemonic," "Conspiracy," "The Trueman Show," and currently "The Matrix" visually portray the basic elements for human mind control. The implantation of a control device connected to the brain, the capacity to download programs into the device, and the manipulation of the subjects brain responses and behaviour through the transmitted signals from a controller, are readily recognized. So, too, is the presentation of reality to the controlled subject as a "virtual" reality. Many of these themes are also present in the TV series 'The Pretender'. Time Magazine (1998) describes a City of Los Angeles program to implant a microchip in every cat and dog adopted from its shelters. The procedure was first used 10 years ago to monitor elk and cattle herds for research.

In all the research referred to above there is a direct connection between the ability to influence conscious behaviour and the control of the brain mechanisms to produce such behaviour. It is thus important to consider how memory, sight and hearing function, as these appear to be associated with the capacity to achieve mind control in a human being. They impact directly on our understanding of what 'reality' is.

The fundamental claims by Bohm (1980) "that tangible reality of our everyday lives is really an illusion, like a holographic image" convinced him that the operations of the universe are actually based on holographic principles "with itself a kind of giant flowing hologram." Underlying this concept of existence, is "a vast and more primary level of reality that gives birth to all the objects and appearances of our physical world in much the same way that a piece of holographic film (an interferogram) gives birth to a hologram" (Talbot 1991). Bohm calls this deep order of reality the "implicate" (which means enfolded), and he refers to our own level of existence as the "explicate" or unfolded order. Indeed Bohm describes the universe as a "holomovement" rather than a hologram in order to convey the dynamic and even active nature of the enfoldings and unfoldings that "moment by moment create our universe" (Talbot 1991). Such a theory based on holographic principles, implies that reality is non-local at the subquantum level and the information contained in the implicate would have non-local properties.

Deutsch (1997) argues that the fabric of reality in the physical world is composed of many universes 'parallel' to the one we see around us. Bohm constructed a theory of reality 'with predictions identical to those of quantum theory' and such that his enfoldings and unfolding 'does not change the fact that in his theory reality consists of large sets of complex entities, each of which can perceive other entities in its own set but can only indirectly perceive entities in other sets'. These sets of entities are, in other words, parallel universes. Based on quantum theory and explanations for the photons we can see and not see, a chain of reasoning, based on the above fact is presented by Deutsch which 'rules out the possibility that the universe we see around us constitutes the whole of reality. In fact the whole of physical reality, the multiverse, contains vast numbers of parallel universes.'

'Quantum technology flatly contradicts our common-sense ideas of how the world works. It posits a world where computers operate without being turned on and objects are found without looking for them (Milburn, 1998). An unimaginably powerful computer can be built from a single molecule. Information moves instantly between two points, without wires or networks. Distant objects are examined without any contact. Computers do their calculations in other universes. And teleportation—'Beam me up Scotty'—is ordinary and used in many different ways (Crichton, 1999). To date, many advances have been made in developing quantum ultrasecure messages suggesting that a quantum internet will be built. In addition experiments in the teleportation of solid objects has been demonstrated in 3 laboratories around the world. 'Time travel may or may not be achieved one day', but Deutsch (1997) concludes that 'post-directed time travel is not paradoxical and is a major area for theoretical study'.

The fundamental understandings referred to above can form a base for explaining how the mind dissociates and stores the information on each fragment created. Access to this information and interference in the communication control processes would require a controller to access the enfolded or coded interferogram and produce a new image of reality and action.

In an interview with Psychology Today, Karl Pribram states "It isn't that the world of appearances is wrong; it isn't that there aren't objects out there, at one level reality. It's that if you penetrate through and look at the universe with a holographic system, you arrive at a different view, a different reality. And that other reality can explain things that have hitherto remained unexplainable scientifically--paranormal phenomena, synchronicities, the apparently meaningful coincidence of events."

In a further application of the above findings to an understanding of Out-of-Body or Near-Death experiences, the literature suggests that "under the right circumstances our consciousness--the thinking, perceiving part of us--can detach from the physical body and exist just about anywhere it wants to" (Talbot 1991). This concept is based on the non-local characteristics of objects in a holographic universe. By extension to our brain functions everything is non-local, including consciousness. Think of a dream, what you perceive in your consciousness appears to be localised in your head but in reality you are in the dream, "location is also an illusion because everything perceived is unfolding out of the deeper more fundamental reality of the dreamer" (Talbot 1991).

Both quantum-consciousness theories and neural ones are rejected by Chalmers. Chalmers (1996) argued that physical theories can account only for the various functions of the brain such as perception, memory and decision-making. But no physical theory can explain why these cognitive functions are accompanied by conscious sensations. His theory of consciousness posits the existence of a new fundamental property: information. Information has some physical embodiment such as the arrangement of ink spots on a piece of paper or electrons in a computer. But information is not purely 'physical:' it also has a 'phenomenal' aspect. Indeed reality is much more than we can see and appears to be strongly related to a multiverse.

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY:

This study is part of an on going research project that tracks the healing and integration of dissociated fragments to achieve wholeness in the dissociator/sufferer as well as examine indications of mind control techniques.

The research was based on a longitudinal case study design with one highly complex (many sub parts) dissociator, (Eisenhardt 1989, Yin 1984). Historical and interview data were collected on the whole life of Deva Paul. This case was selected for both theoretical and clinical reasons as an intentional sample (Glaser and Strauss 1967). The research was carried out in two stages. The first stage, from April 1994 to August 1996 focused on the clinical evaluation of dissociation. The second stage of the research, from August 1996 to September 1998, and the subject of this paper, focused on the factors associated with creating dissociation and the formation of techniques to use dissociation for control purposes. Formal interviews were held on a daily basis with Deva Paul (the executive of the system) and with other presenting sub-parts as they occurred. Following these interview sessions integration of the sub-parts into Deva Paul would occur using the techniques described in Gillin, Gillin and Paul (1997 b). The current stage of research is concerned with establishing the structure, membership, facilities and techniques of a world organization committed to using advanced technology in the development of mind control and manipulation of world power.

All interviews lasted a minimum of two hours and were open-ended. No tape recorders were used but the interviewers made extensive notes. Some video taping of the integration (fusion) process was recorded. The interviews and integration procedures were conducted by the first and second authors of this paper. Comparison between the author's notes and between the evidence provided by many of the presenting parts showed a consistent agreement to a level that was exceptional. This provided confidence that the data were both valid and reliable.

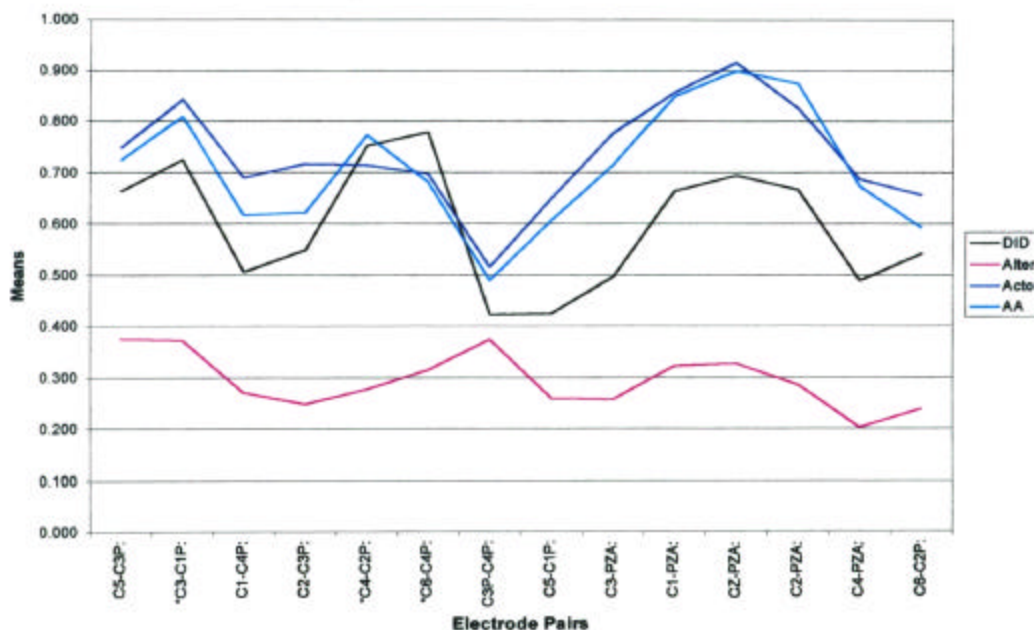

Fig. 1 Average alpha coherence for DID subjects, actors, alters and acted alters.

Research by Hopper et al, 1999, strongly supports the individuality of presenting parts (alters) in D.I.D. hosts. Fig. 1 shows no significant differences were found between D.I.D. participants, professional actors and their acted alters; but very significant differences between a D.I.D. host and their alter personalities using E.E.G. alpha coherence measures in regions of the cortex.

Historical data, such as birth, residences, associations with friend's etc. were obtained from printed material and interviews with third parties. This historical data made it possible to construct a quantitative picture of the factors that drove the development of dissociation over the life of Deva Paul. Data collection was concluded when a level of satisfaction was reached (Glaser and Strauss 1967).

This study is subjected to the general limitations associated with field research. While it would be useful to study a larger sample of dissociators subjected to mind control, no in-depth study of a highly positioned asset in a mind-controlling organisation exists. By concentrating on this one dissociator the researchers had access to sources with intimate knowledge of the details of the evolution of mind control techniques.

DESCRIPTION OF THE CASE:

For the period 21 February to 20 April 1998, a total of some 59 nights, the dissociator, Deva Paul, reported that she was accessed, that is, her conscious thought processes were interfered with and she found her perceived self at a distant technological facility. This facility has been identified as Pine Gap, a major Defence Facility in Australia (see www.octa4.net.au). Deva Paul states categorically that a large underground research facility exists below the surface buildings and in the hills close by (see www.octa4.net.au). Other information provided on the website quotes direct support for a multi-level underground facility. Deva Paul had been a part of a world wide technological organisation for 36 years.

In the paper Gillin et al (1997 a) a detailed description is provided of how Deva was fragmented or dissociated from Denise who was born in the North of England of parents committed to the involvement in occult practices. In 1964 this duo system migrated with their parents to South Australia. Denise commenced therapy with one of the authors in April 1994 after referral from a Christian doctor for possible dissociation. Some 314 (altar) fragments were identified. All but 3 were fused into Denise by November 1997. In August 1996, after an incident of severe physical abuse to Denise that was both dysfunctional and emotional, Deva surfaced, confronted the therapist for the first time and offered to work with her. Deva in effect defected from the organisation known as the Global Technological World Alliance (G.T.W.A.). By September 1996 there was clear evidence of medical R &D and organisational abuse in Deva and a high probability of physical interference. All 667 (altar) fragments were fused back into Deva by August 1997.

In the follow-up interviews to each of the nightly events associated with the current level of abuse (21Feb-20Apr.) Deva reported that she perceived herself present within the Defence research facility in a manifested form that could see, hear, feel and move about. In this total situation she was confronted by abuse coordinators who were known to her from her previous attachment to the organisation. From this cycle of abuse, dissociation and control, Deva was subjected to the appearance of many of her associates with whom she had worked in the laboratories, in strategic planning sessions and on specific research projects. A number from both Australia and overseas had been her mentors during her training and activity in the G.T.W.A.

On each night of the abuse period one or more of these organisational colleagues or mentors would be subjected to severe physical and technological abuse. The severity of this abuse was so traumatic that the observing Deva would dissociate by creating a new fragment or part in her that could be programmed by the organisation. In the majority of cases the severity of abuse to the abused colleague or mentor produced even more shock in Deva. Table 1 provides a summary of the events covered in the period including the abusers, the number of organisation persons abused and the number of fragments created in Deva.

Deva reported that she was subjected to a technical process in which recorded information on an abused person, or fragments with the means to control her actions or behaviour could be downloaded into Deva's mind. Such information does result in Deva experiencing much pain and suffering in her physical body during fusion of these parts into herself. Subsequent to the nightly activities referred to above it was necessary to 'cleanse' these foreign parts from Deva's psyche and integrate them back into herself so she remained a whole person. The process of fusion followed was identical with those described by Gillin, Gillin and Paul 1997 b.

Overall some 231 created parts from both traumatic and technological abuse were fused back into Deva. (Table 1). Some 181 organisation persons, including mentors aged over 70, laboratory professionals and technicians, children of all ages and babies were used to achieve this experimental program of organisational abuse and control.

CASE DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS :

Within a 5 km. radius of Deva's home, Deva is observed to respond to some unseen and outside force. This force exhibits itself initially by a sudden movement of the head, severe pain in the head, and general convulsive body movements. Such behaviour occurs regularly in the home, when shopping, in the car, in church and even in the theatre.

At home these effects occur regularly, consistently and in all respects in a reproducible way. In the extreme, Deva can be 'bolted' out of her chair to collapse on the floor and in many cases be knocked unconscious. A number of visitors have reported a heaviness on entering the home and in particular Deva's bedroom- 'like pushing through a wall'.

Using a sensitive search coil as a probe and a BWD 826 oscilloscope with a range of 0-50 MHz., an examination was made for the presence of electro-magnetic energy in and around Deva. Figures 2(a-d) show the magnitude of frequency traces: 13X in the lounge room (b), 52X in the bedroom (c) and 70X close to Deva's head(d), compared to a central reading in the laboratory of 2X, see(a).

Electro- Magnetic Energy around Deva

An initial use of a layer of unearthed bronze wire gauze placed over the left side of the head during a heavy stage of bolting increased in temperature by approximately 10 Degrees Celsius and was warm to the touch. Earthing the filter eliminated the temperature rise and reduced significantly the impact of the bolting and interference to the head. A side effect after some fifteen minutes wearing a special gauze and fibreglass filter fitted to a helmet was the development of a headache in the forehead.

In an attempt to measure the actual frequencies of what was considered to be energy transmissions, a spectrum analyser was installed. Amazingly, and during a 24-hour monitoring period no unusual or large transmissions were identified. However during the exact same period Deva felt no bolts or interference whatsoever to the head from external sources. Indeed other observers remarked that there was an absence of heaviness in the room.

During periods of intense interference and bolting Deva reports the presence of a burning sensation in her body, extensive perspiration and the formation of tiny blisters on the extremities of the body, at the feet and hands.

Of specific relevance is that Cometta (quoted in Andrews 1993) states that Pine Gap is not only a Space Research Facility but is also “used to study Electro-Magnetic Propulsion , EMP”. “This research is conducted completely underground”. He also claims there is an installed underground antenna “that can be used to generate a gigantic ‘standing-wave’ around the earth which is the basis for a new type of transmitter-receiver (transceiver)”. Cometta has also identified the presence of computers of “huge capacity” and which are interconnected to similar assets in “Guam, Krugersdorp (South Africa) and the Amundsen-Scott U. S. base at the South Pole.

Finding 1: A massive external energy source is directed and received by Deva.

Observation shows Deva possesses a highly developed sense of hearing and is capable of deciphering conversations and or specific sounds either at a significant distance or within a noisy situation.

In addition she is able to hear sounds having frequencies well above the normal range and probably in excess of 20K cycles. A number of carers associated with Deva have heard noises, often bird like that trigger a part in Deva to surface. At other times unheard sounds can also trigger Deva. On 24th April 1998 Matthew Paul, whilst sitting in an adjoining room to Deva, cried out in pain at the intensity of the high frequency sound he could hear. At the same time a part in Deva was triggered. Over one hour this process was repeated three times.

A particular example of heightened hearing was observed over a period from 21st January to 8th February 1998. For long periods each day and night Deva, and also parts Denzal and Suggestion, could hear the music of the ABC, FM broadcast (105.9). No radio was operating in the flat, no music could be heard outside but on asking the type of music and rhythm and then switching on the ABC, FM station perfect matching of the transmission occurred. The tests were repeated many times on each of the three parts and perfect matching was obtained. Of interest is that when songs were being sung only the accompanying music was transmitted.

According to Depris (1989) “The FM radio band that goes from 87.5 to 108 MHz is one of the most dangerous to the public health, given the lengths of the waves under consideration (from about 3.40 to 2.75 m)”. He argues that the human body acts as a receptive antenna. “Global resonance for the average individual would be ideal for functioning as a grounded half-wave antenna, a mode that permits the capture of a maximum amount of energy emitted by this FM radio band”. Deva, whose height is 1.55 m will resonate to the maximum at a half-wave of 105 MHz.

In addition voice messages are heard. These messages can be validated by reference to other parts within the dissociated system. Each part independently confirms the same message. In many cases the message, by its content, indicates that previous discussions between Deva and carers has been overheard. In particular and following the departure of carers and their sounds and conversations, entry to the flat by abusers of Deva has occurred. The type and reason for the abuse to Deva often reflects knowledge of the nature of the discussions and a desire to intimidate Deva.

Finding 2: a) Deva's hypersensitive hearing can be accessed by audio triggering of dissociated parts.

b) Eavesdropping may imply a hearing device?

The finding that Deva both receives and responds to direct energy fields pre-supposes the presence of a receiver/ transducer in the body. Deva herself identifies the implant as behind the left ear. She asserts the original device was implanted in 1968 at the age of 7 years. The chip was upgraded 3 times, the last in 1988. Reprogramming has occurred by external means since then.

During continued energy transmission and 'bolting' of Deva, a raised lump develops behind the left ear and continued rubbing on the spot during a period of unconsciousness can arouse Deva back to consciousness. Furthermore the observed minimisation of energy bolting effects on Deva when an earthed gauze filter is placed over the ear area suggests the presence of a device sensitive to electro-magnetic radiation. An important reaction to the application of radiation to Deva's head and ear area during CATSCAN examinations in 1997, Jan.1998 and Jan 2000 was the initial heating of the left side of the head followed by unconsciousness during the scan. Regaining consciousness took some 10 minutes after completion of the scan and 2-3 days for the painful effects around the ear to disappear.

Examination of the CATSCAN (Jan. 2000) radiographs in the area of the middle ear cavity and the petrous temporal bone indicates the presence of a small air/fluid level within an inferior left mastoid air space. It is quite localized (Fig 3). This fluid was not present in the Jan. 1998 images (Fig 4). The small change in shape of the airspace is a result of differences of the angle of scan. By overlaying these scans the space can be positioned as being immediately behind the left ear lobe and in exactly the position Deva has claimed a 'chip' is implanted. The shape is also significant as Gentry, a DID alter, had previously drawn a pear-shaped cavity as the site for an implanted 'chip'. Gentry claimed the 'chip' was inserted into the neck-end of the cavity from where connections were made. Examination of Fig 4 in the area of the cavity neck, indicates a rectangle (approx 8 mm by 2 mm) of greater brightness than the surrounding bone, i.e. a higher density. If this is linked with the observation that application of externally applied pressure to this spot (Fig 5) can change Deva's state of consciousness, then the bright rectangle (fig 4) could indicate the presence of a piezoelectric ceramic transducer. No such feature is observed on the right side.

CATSCAN Radiographs of Deva

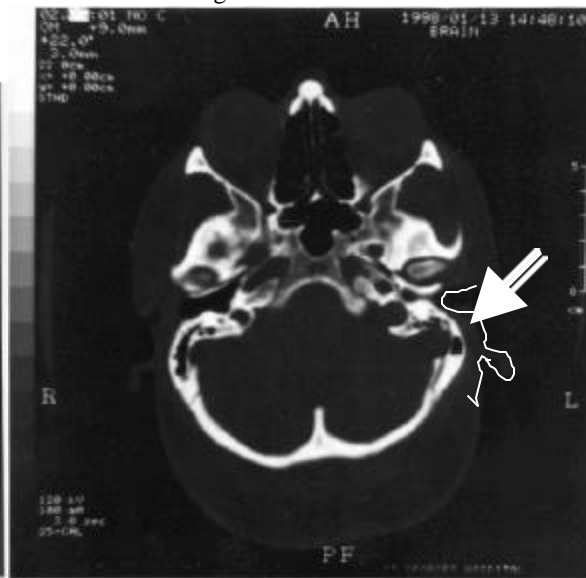

Fig 4

Such a conclusion is collaborated by the fact that during a number of forced entries individuals have applied energy to the area through electrodes to the head, injections through the ear lobe area and application of laser energy behind the ear. Figure 5a shows a burning imprint behind the left ear and an injection Fig 5b in the ear after such forced entries. Both points in Fig. 5 are directly over the 'chip' shown in Figs. 3 & 4. In addition such reprogramming of transponder frequencies results in changes to the required pressures applied to the area by carers to Deva in order to regain her consciousness after 'energy bolting'. These effects correspond with the reported development of mastoiditis in the region of the cavity (Fig 3) and probably results from the external interference made during periods of re-programming.

Finding 3: That an energy/ laser sensitive transponder is implanted behind the left ear.

For the whole period of this case study Deva has been subject to extended and varied periods of unconsciousness which can and do occur at any time of the day or night. These periods of unconsciousness are not evoked by Deva but appear to be associated with specifically timed and engineered applications of energy transmissions via the transducer. This suggests that the transducer can transmit to the brain the necessary signals for it to shut down consciousness. Such a hypothesis is supported by the fact that interference from energy transmissions can be minimized by way of an energy-filtering helmet and by rubbing and pressing on the implant facilitating Deva regaining consciousness or maintaining consciousness. Also, when out of range of the energy footprint (5-7Km. radius) no energy is received at the implant and no controlled or unexpected periods of unconsciousness occurs. Access to the mind processors is still possible during periods of "sleep".

The question can well be asked what causes Deva to go unconscious?

According to Deva, during such a state of unconsciousness her mind is accessed or in other words the spirit-soul is accessed and can be separated from the physical body. Indeed, the data collected over 3.5 years of observation and recording of these periods of unconsciousness indicates that Deva perceives her spirit-soul to be in another location. In addition the spirit-soul of any dissociated part can be accessed. Deva and the other parts confirm this transfer is to a high technology facility within Australia. Such a concept of access implies that the spirit-soul can move separately from the physical body.

These observations show a striking likeness to experiences recorded in the literature (Talbot 1991) of Out-of-Body and Near-Death cases. In general these experiences can be understood in terms of a holographic universe “where location is itself an illusion” (Talbot 1991). Based on the developing evidence that the brain operates holographically and that vision and memory are processed holographically it is implied that the information is encoded in an interferogram of different wavelike phenomena (Pribram 1969). Thus the hologram was “there all the time in the wave front nature of brain-cell connectivity” (Pribram 1991). In effect, and “under the right circumstances our consciousness- the thinking, perceiving part of us- can detach from the physical body and exist just about any where it wants to” (Talbot). Deutsch (1997) would argue that this so-called detachment is in-reality another image of the self in an alternative universe of the multiverse. To detach requires a means of transfer that in this case appears to be achieved by medium of electro magnetic waves. This process would also confirm the presence of a facility with the necessary technology, associated controllers and operators with the intent and determination to interfere with and control the minds of human beings.

Finding 4: The mind and a spirit-soul can be accessed holographically and re-located or transported to a fixed facility electro magnetically.

Based on individual reports by Deva, and internal parts Denzal, Suggestion and Gentry, total agreement is found over each part being fully conscious after access and transfer to the technology facility. Indeed, recognition of the full processes of the brain, senses and body responses are identical to those experienced when present in the physical body. This awareness of “a person form “is also reported by those who experience Out-of-Body and Near-Death phenomena (Talbot 1991). The former radio and television executive, R. Monroe, asserts “that it is our thought habits that create our OB forms. Because we are so habituated to being in a body, we have a tendency to reproduce the same form in the OB state” (Monroe 1971). He goes on to state that in our disembodied form we drop all such disguises, we are at heart a “vibrational pattern (comprised) of many interacting and resonating frequencies”(Monroe 1985). This emphasis on resonating frequencies aligns with Bohm’s view of the holographic universe in which ultimately the human being senses the frequency phenomenon and our mind converts these into various holographic forms (Talbot 1991). This capacity for holographic- reformation enables the “re-located conscience” to speak, see, hear and feel, all the bodily functions.

By contrast, Deutsch (1997) describes a theoretical treatment of a virtual reality machine in which the ‘I’ can enter the universe of her alter ego at a different location and interact with each other. Such parallel universes do not have hidden serial numbers: they are distinguished only by what happens to them. Therefore ‘in rendering all this for the benefit of ‘me’, the virtual reality generator must recreate for me the effect of existing as two identical copies who then become different and have different experiences’. To achieve this: ‘the virtual reality generator must have the ability to render time travel accurately and depends on its having detailed information about the user’s state-of-mind’.

If the above is true then controllers and operators at the technical facility interact with the holographic reform as if they were interfacing with the physical body. Deva has asserted since 1996, that the GTWA conduct research at advanced technical facilities into accessing the mind of a subject from a distance. She also claims they are researching techniques for ‘physical teleportation’.

Finding 5: Accessed brain waves can be reformed holographically at a distant facility.

It has long being recognised that dissociation, or fragmentation, occurs as a result of traumatic abuse by persons outside of the core personality, (Van der Kolk et al 1996), (Gillin, Gillin, Paul 1997a). Due to the amnesic or partially amnesic walls, which block the memory of trauma for an indefinite number of years, an adult may grow from childhood having numerous dissociated fragments. This situation was true of Deva (Gillin et al 1997 a) until August 1997 when, after some 10 months, all the fragments were finally fused back into the single personality of Deva (Gillin, Gillin and Paul 1997 b).

Indeed Deva, now a whole being, was determined never to allow for any dissociated fragments to remain in her system beyond a few hours. In the period from August 1997 to the events reported in this case study, namely 21 February 1998 – 20 April 1998, many fragments were created due to facing traumatic experiences but for every fragment, fusion was achieved within 24 hours.

The corollary associated with finding 5, or the reforming of a "part" holographically at a distant facility, opens the way for the holographic re-form to be re-traumatized through the senses. Indeed Deva, Denzal, Suggestion and Gentry report in graphic detail the events witnessed at the distant facility and experience the same dissociative responses as occurred when previously fragmented from age 3 to 36 years. In other words it is not necessary to have the physical body present in order to achieve dissociation.

The consideration of the processes of dissociation associated with the period reported in this study are based on the creation of 231 trauma and technological based fragments in Deva (Table 1). To achieve this level of fragmentation more than 18 abusers were used with a variety of methods designed to affect a shock reaction in Deva and hence dissociation.

The foundation for the abuse reported in this study is the application of pain, mental, physical and sexual abuse to a wide range of human beings having had some relationship or emotional attachment to Deva and the other parts. For this study some 181 organisation persons including Deva, were abused to achieve the levels of dissociation reported. As an example, for the 18 nights from the 4-20 April, the abuser known as the Cape-Town man from South Africa abused some 49 persons and created some 53 fragments in Deva.

Denzal sketched the outline of this man (Fig.6) and, when shown to some 15 created parts all recognised the abuser and were fearful of him. All abusers were recognised and named. They came from Australia, Europe, U.K., USA and South Africa.

FIG. 6 The "Cape-Town Man"

The concept of traumatic shock was enhanced by deliberately playing on forms of abuse known to reflect the elements of torture, pain and suffering as used on Deva and the other parts to robotise their actions and behaviours. The characteristics of the abuse varied from: the sacrifice of babies and young genetic clones to the physical and sexual abuse of persons with strong connections to Deva; application of mind bending audio frequencies; strobe lighting and subliminal visuals to create virtual reality torment; the use of electrodes to parts of the body to "inject" programmed patterns; application of high energy lasers to critical components of the brain and or to implanted chips and hence overload the device with a resulting implosion; application of acids to produce disfigurement; subjection to water drip torment and or submersion in water tanks to slowly induce death. In addition many ceremonial "black masses" were performed with the ritualistic removal of organs and body parts.

It is significant that all these abuse situations were performed in high tech facilities such that the mental and physical responses of the person to the abuse were recorded for later re-use in programming Deva and Denzal, an associated part. Another danger associated with created fragments is the potential to attract attached spirits (Gillin et al 1997 b). However, as such fragments were generally fused into Deva within 12 hours, only 12 attached spirits were encountered. These included for example the spirit of Antichrist, Death, Organisation, Suicide and False Trinity. Deliverance was achieved using the Christian based technique described in Gillin, Gillin, and Paul (1997 c)

Finding 6

That the reformed holographic image of a physical being can be further dissociated by exposure of the holographic image to sadistic torture performed on living people.

Subsequent to Deva regaining consciousness after periods of access it has been demonstrated unambiguously that the resulting created fragments can be called forth and communicated with. This is true for each of the 206 trauma induced parts in Deva and 35 in Denzal. In every situation the fragments will reflect the core personality of the tortured person and with the capacity to speak and reason. These persons ranged from 4 to 87 years of age. In addition the created parts have knowledge and memory of the actual torture inflicted on the person and can recount the extent of the damage and or pain to body organs resulting from the abuse. This critical observation implies that the recorded personal characteristics of the person abused and mental awareness of the pain and damage can be transferred to the created part so the fragment can act in all respects independent of the abused principal.

At least 90% of the created parts expressed a determination to be helpful to Deva in her battle to gain freedom. Over 50% of the created parts reported awareness of behavioural requirements that could injure Deva or cause her to act in a way prejudicial to remaining independent of any form of control. In each of these cases the created part reported that electrodes had been attached to the head of the holographic "image" and energy applied in association with the use of laser beams to the critical components of the brain.

This concept of "down-loading" supports the earlier observation that recorded information can be installed in the brain of the created part. Such information can be used to influence the actions of a created part when it is triggered to be the presenting part of the physical Deva.

A variant of the above process is when a fragment is created in the accessed holographic brain by the use of technological instruments, eg laser shock rather than the use of the trauma shock technique. This approach was used 25 times on Deva and 12 on Denzal. Such an approach appears to correlate with the above when existing data bank information is required to be downloaded and for the resulting part to act independently. For example re-programming a complex part "Stringer" with many sub-parts. "Stringer" had previously surfaced in Deva but was fused totally into her. This part is described in Gillin et al (1997 a) and confirms that behavioural and brain information about a person can be stored and at a later time transferred to a receptive brain. Another example is the case where a part "Loris" is downloaded which can express many of the characteristics of the actual Loris Gillin but in addition includes the situation of her being involved in a serious car accident.

Finding 7

Recorded neural information of a person can be re-programmed into a created part and other data-bank information down-loaded into the created part.

The antidote to programming is de-programming or fusion, which is the fusion of created fragments into the whole. The technique of fusion has been fully reported in Gillin et al (1997 b & c) and is based on the dissociated and programmed Deva first owning the presence of unwanted parts and a determination to fuse them back into Deva's being. In this case Deva is determined that the fragments be fused within 24 hours. Preparation for fusion requires a clear identification of each of the fragments present in Deva by name, the process of creation and any programmed knowledge both in regard to deliberate behaviour or in terms of damage to organs and body functions. Once these details are acknowledged, Deva and the therapist/ pastor present the claims of Christ to the previously blocked-off fragments within Deva, using the Bible, prayer and Christian symbols.

In this case it was normal for more than one fragment to be present at each fusion session. As described earlier multiple dissociations occurred during the period of abuse and hence multiple fragments were able to be programmed. To reduce both the time and the discomfort associated with the presence of created fragments, where appropriate, these elements were fused into one fragment that acted as an associated executive component. In the 8-week period in this study, corresponding to 59 nights, 231 fragments were fused into Deva and 50 into Denzal's system.

Subsequent to these preliminaries Deva would take executive control of her system and say..." I fuse the (name) of the fragment or combined fragments into herself. Such a statement would result immediately in massive body reactions to the fusion process. These reactions can include massive convulsions, locking of limbs, severe nerve ending pain in body limbs, stroke and paralyses of face and body sides, loss of speech and or sight, stopping of heart, lung function and kidney sensations. Without immediate application of prayer, hymn singing, pressure to appropriate pressure points and direct intervention by the part of "Gentry" who had been involved in research into organ interference, the reactions to the fusion could have proven fatal. Indeed some of the reactions such as paralysis, loss of speech and sight and breathing could take up to 72 hours to recover during the period in which integration of memories and body is completed.

Where spirit attachment is identified then deliverance must be facilitated prior to fusion to avoid any attachment to the core of Deva. (See Gillin et al 1997 b & c). Also in some cases it was necessary to use E.M.D.R. on Deva prior to fusion to offset the effect of "fail-safes" or hidden programs surfacing during the fusion process. (Gillin et al 1997 b).

Finding 8:

Fusion of programmed fragments back into the core of Deva results in severe pain and discomfort and damage to the physical body.

Examination of the interviews with the 281 newly created parts and Deva, Denzal, Suggestion and Gentry have identified the following:

- On every night there was a person or persons present that controlled and facilitated abuse of living subjects; that these subjects had or did work for an organisation associated with technical research and political alliances;
- that advanced defence research facilities were used;
- that research techniques including application of holography, lasers, long range radars, satellite communications and neural experiments were applied to the subjects;
- that prominent surgeons and research geneticists were used to surgically operate on some subjects.

Close checking and validation of the fragment's comments and experiences has resulted in unanimous agreement to the existence of an organisation with access to the most advanced technological techniques and determined to experiment and use the new techniques to control Deva.

Finding 9:

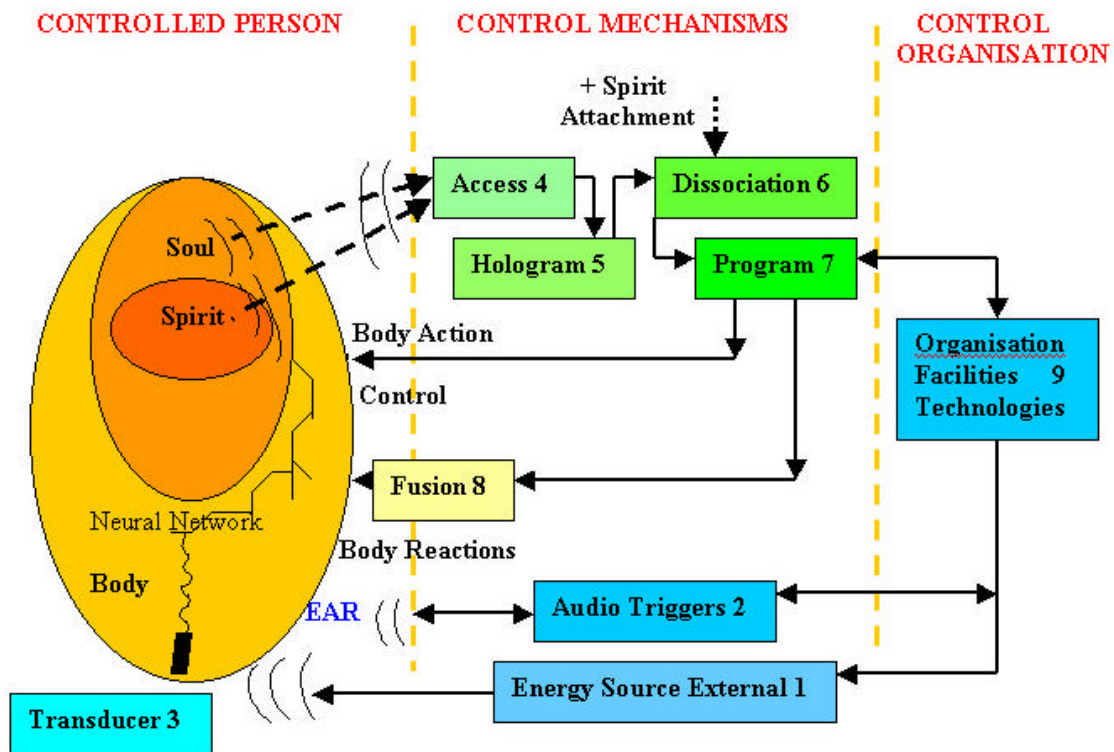

That an organisation with access to advanced technology and facilities and focused on controlling human behaviour on demand exists.

CONCLUSIONS:

For the period of this study, over some 59 consecutive nights, Deva was observed to be accessed each night and would regain consciousness only to find that new and sometimes dangerous parts would surface during the day and night.

Interviews with each of the 281 parts confirmed that the abuse cycle was no accident or figment of the imagination. Indeed medical, psychiatric and psychological examinations have concluded that Deva is not neurotic, psychotic or delusional. These events follow the period September 1997 to August 1998 when some 800 parts created in Deva over 36 years were gradually fused such that Deva became a whole person and not a controlled robot. A report on the formation of parts in Deva and their resultant fusion for the period of 36 years is reported in Gillin et al 1997 a & b. All the parts had been created and programmed such that each part could carry out specific activities related to research and organisational activity and or to ensure that Deva acted appropriately and maintained a robotic and guaranteed behaviour pattern.

In this study each of the created parts is designed to contribute to the destruction of Deva's wholeness, to cause her body to be permanently disabled and to choose to return to the organisation voluntarily. Based on the nine findings of the case examination it is concluded that the overall process is that of achieving mind control in Deva. Fig 7 shows a diagrammatic model for the mind control process in terms of the controlled person, control mechanisms, and the control organisation. Given the evidence for the existence of interference from an external energy source, the evident dissociation and fragment behaviour and the results of fusion of these fragments back into Deva, the first eight findings shown in fig 7 are consistent with the control mechanisms identified and their impact and effect on the controlled person.

PROCESS MODEL FOR MIND CONTROL

Finding nine is thus an obvious extension to compliment the first eight findings. In other words, an organisation exists with access to advanced technology, facilities and technologists and desire to control the behaviours of a person remotely.

Of particular significance is that many of the created parts are identified with the work of individual abusers, whether they are torture specialists, physicist, brain scientists, material specialists, surgeons and genetic researchers as well as politicians. This abuse was administered in the research facilities of a Defence Organisation and also at leading hospitals.

Given the fact that forced entry into Deva's home has occurred a number of times and she had been physically interfered with, it is reasonable to ask why was she not taken and returned to the organisation. Based on the recent developments in remote dissociation and programming of holographic representations of Deva it can be confidently concluded that the organisation is experimenting with Deva on a nightly basis to refine and extend their capacity to remotely control any person having an implanted chip capable of responding to their remote use of energy and laser technology.

This horrific approach to creating trauma, the worldwide use of different abusers showing total indifference to life and the relentless application of advanced technology indicates that the ethos of this Organisation (GTWA) is "the end justifies the means".

CROP CIRCLES MADE FROM MILITARY SATELLITES LASERS

Judaeo-masonic occultists in

Crop Circles Made by Military Satellites

I have been visiting some crop circles in the UK, and I took some samples of vegetation and dead insects with me.

At home, with my microscope I have been carefully observing the tissues of the plants and of the insects. In order to find out how their state could be reproduced, I put some healthy plants and insects in a modified microwave oven combined with a laser burner (yes, I am truly sorry for this rude experiment) and I examined the tissues under the microscope.

Comparing the tissues, that I took from the crop circles in the UK with that I took from my microwave oven, brought me to an interesting conclusion : they look highly similar.

In other words, the cropcircles have been produced by microwave laser technology. This technology is used by the military.

Microwave laser games

As you know, with lasers it is possible to cut (fashion, dentist, etc.), bend and melt (industrial), and so forth, at great precision and from large distance. Microwave laser technology, or better, maser etc.), bend and melt (industrial), and so forth, at great precision and from large distance. Microwave laser technology, or better, maser technology, is used at a military satellite in order to "shoot" maser beams at precisely computed locations on our planet.

This kind of satellite is aimed to destroy anything at any time at any location under any atmospheric circumstances. Such satellite is not publicly known, i.e. kept secret, of course, and is responsible for several "unresolved" airplane crashes.

Yes my dear visitor, maser satellites are flying right over you and you are not safe. It is all in the game of cover-up, misusing the belief of mankind that extra-terrestrials are having an artistic party overnight. Well, not so, as the militaries are playing around with masers, using computers to design nice patterns and to guide the maser beams.

In the early 1970's I started playing with mainframe computers to produce nice mathematical patterns. And sure I was not the only one. It is a common hobbyism. Nothing to do with galactic federations and Alien prophecies or symbols of universal wisdom.

Now, back to my microscopic investigation : in both cases (from the UK by artistic militaries and from my microwave & laser burner) the tissues of the plants showed tiny particles of near-crystallized dust that were melted / bonded with the tissue. Both the plants and the insects were literally cooked. This effect can only be reached by masers.

Aiming a computer guided maser at high altitude towards a crop field, in about 15 seconds a large complex pattern can be projected and "cooked in", using rotating maserbeams (it would be quite unfortunate if you would be moving under the beam at such moment)

Weapon used as toy

This is how crop circles are made, with a computer guided maser satellite, by bored artistic militaries. Period.

This is how crop circles are made, with a computer guided maser satellite, by bored artistic militaries. Period.

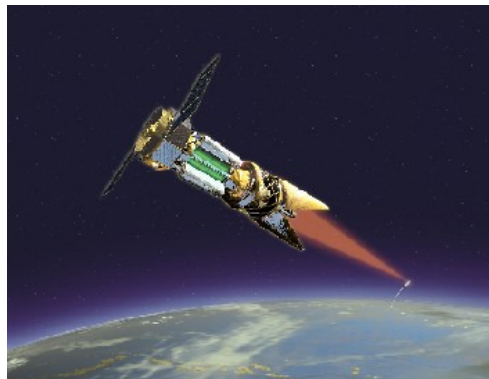

Oh, and the light flashes ? Well, simple, because of the electromagnetic field that is caused by the maser, the energy release is perceived as a flash of light. Sure they leave traces of energy in the plants, commonly incorrectly interpreted as spiritual energies of some sort. I have been into this research myself when I was studying all that stuff for my graduation.

By the way, if indeed Aliens have been around for thousands of years, how come that only since a few years cropcircles have been reported ? Since a few years, however, we do have star wars satellites - made by us - orbiting planet Earth. Once again, crop circles are NOT made by Aliens or UFOs, but simply by a maser satellite, programmed by a bunch of geeks. Keep it simple.

Yes, Space Based Laser Platforms Are Real

August 23, 2015

Way back in April of 2013 we took a look at the emerging technology of laser weapons in space, primarily to take out “enemy” satellites, and possibly to strike targets on the surface of the planet. Following up, in April 2014 we ran an article about the U.S Navy’s new laser weapon, which appears to be very powerful and inexpensive to operate compared to artillery shells. In this post we will update the revelations of laser warfare, something that has probably existed for quite some time and is just getting more sophisticated. First, here’s the links to those two articles:

Navy Shows Off New Laser Weapon <http://www.covertbookreport.com/navy-shows-off-new-laser-weapon/>

Here’s the first article for some background:

Every time some underdeveloped nation (like North Korea this week) rattles the nuclear saber, I have to wonder about the long-rumored existence of “Space-based laser platforms”.

Dating back to German scientists (Britans were worried about a “death ray”) who were brought into the U.S. after WW2, through the Regan-era “Star Wars” missile-defense system, laser technology has been proposed to blast missiles out of orbit after launch.

Just such a system would be quite useful against rogue states, but because of the potential for offensive use against earth targets would have to be kept under tight wraps.

One could imagine that a treaty could exist between a coalition of powerful nations to only use this technology for agreed purposes.

What lends some credibility to this scenario is the saga of British stoner-computer hacker Gary McKinnon. Until recently, McKinnon was facing extradition and prison charges in the U.S. for hacking into extremely sensitive defense and NASA computers.

What did he find?

Evidence of the U.S. Space Command. That’s right, a branch of the U.S. Navy that has a fleet of orbital space stations.

From “The Honolulu Examiner”, October 2012:

UFO hacker wins battle against US Government

“On Tuesday November 16, British hacker Gary McKinnon finally won his decade long battle to avoid extradition to the US to face charges of hacking into the computer systems of NASA, the Pentagon and other government agencies. McKinnon claimed to have found photographs, film, and other evidence of alien spacecraft secretly held by various U.S.

...the decade long battle to avoid extradition to the US to face charges of hacking into the computer systems of NASA, the Pentagon and other government agencies. McKinnon claimed to have found photographs, film, and other evidence of alien spacecraft secretly held by various U.S. government agencies.

(snip)

McKinnon first hacked into NASA's Johnson Space Center and said: "he found a high definition picture of a large cigar shaped object over the northern hemisphere. He said that he was so shocked by the picture that he didn't think to immediately save it. He also said that the file size was so large that it was difficult to view it on his computer. Eventually his connection was lost, and so was the picture.

When McKinnon later hacked into classified files of U.S. Space Command (incorporated into Strategic Command on October 1, 2002 soon after McKinnon was caught), he discovered a number of naval terms such as "fleet-to-fleet transfers" concerning non-terrestrial officers. He said: "I found a list of officers' names ... under the heading 'Non-Terrestrial Officers'. It doesn't mean little green men. What I think it means is not Earth-based. I found a list of 'fleet-to-fleet transfers', and a list of ship names. I looked them up. They weren't US Navy ships. What I saw made me believe they have some kind of spaceship, off-planet."

McKinnon's startling discovery cast light on what had been earlier revealed by no less than a former President of the United States: Ronald Reagan. In President Reagan's Diary, the entry for Tuesday, June 11, 1985 (page 334) reads:

"Lunch with 5 top space scientist. It was fascinating. Space truly is the last frontier and some of the developments there in astronomy etc. are like science fiction, except they are real. I learned that our shuttle capacity is such that we could orbit 300 people.

Reagan's comment was revealing since the recently retired Space Shuttle held a maximum of eight people and only five were built for space flight. Even if all five took off fully loaded it would be impossible to place and maintain 300 astronauts in orbit. Was Reagan revealing the existence of a highly classified space program that could accommodate hundreds of astronauts in orbit? Apparently so, according to dozens of military and corporate whistleblowers. Hidden within one of the nine unified combatant commands of the U.S. military, as McKinnon later discovered, appeared to be a highly classified fleet of aircraft carrier sized ships that operate in outer space.

Now that McKinnon no longer faces the threat of extradition and is unlikely to be prosecuted by British authorities, he may be able to reveal more about what he learned from sensitive U.S. military and government computer files about UFOs and extraterrestrial life."

Every year, thousands of people all over the world witness huge flying "triangles" and other sorts of craft. While some of these may be chalked up to "swamp gas", there are far too many reports from aviation and radar experts to deny the existence of something top secret.

For some background on space-based laser platforms, take a look at this website for The Federation of American Scientists:

Space Based Laser [SBL]The potential to intercept and destroy a missile over enemy territory soon after launch, rather than over friendly territory, makes the development of a boost phase intercept (BPI) capability very desirable. In concert with ground based theater missile defense (TMD) systems already under development, the U.S. continues to investigate BPI concepts for BMD systems.

The SBL program could develop the technology to provide the U.S. with an advanced BMD system for both theater and national missile defense. BMDO believes that an SBL system has the potential to make other contributions to U.S. security and world security as a whole, such as inducing potential aggressors to abandon ballistic missile programs by BMDO believes that an SBL system has the potential to make other contributions to U.S. security and world security as a whole, such as inducing potential aggressors to abandon ballistic missile programs by rendering them useless. Failing that, BMDO believes that the creation of such a universal defense system would provide the impetus for other nations to expand their security agreements with the United States, bringing them under a U. S. sponsored missile defense umbrella. An SBL platform would achieve missile interception by focusing and maintaining a high powered laser on a target until it achieves catastrophic destruction. Energy for the sustained laser burst is generated by the chemical reaction of the hydrogen fluoride (HF) molecule. The HF molecules are created in an excited state from which the subsequent optical energy is drawn by an optical resonator surrounding the gain generator.

Lasers have been studied for their usefulness in air defense since 1973, when the Mid Infrared Advanced Chemical Laser (MIRACL) was first tested against tactical missiles and drone aircraft. Work on such systems continued through the 1980s, with the Airborne Laser Laboratory, which completed the first test laser intercepts above the earth. Initial work on laser based defense systems was overseen by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA), but transferred to the newly created Strategic Defense Initiative Organization (SDIO) in 1984. Work continues today under the auspices of the BMDO, the successor to the SDIO.

Current SBL planning is based on a 20 satellite constellation, operating at a 40° inclination, intended to provide the optimum TMD threat negation capability. At this degree of deployment, kill times per missile will range from 1 to 10 seconds, depending on the range from the missile.

Retargeting times are calculated at as low as 0.5 seconds for new targets requiring small angle changes. It is estimated that a constellation consisting of only 12 satellites can negate 94% of all missile threats in most theater threat scenarios. Thus a system consisting of 20 satellites is expected by BMDO to provide nearly full threat negation.”

If you go to the above link, there are lots of other reference links to research.

I have a feeling that this technology is far more advanced than they are letting on to...

War in Space May Be Closer Than Ever

China, Russia and the U.S. are developing and testing controversial new capabilities to wage war in space despite their denial of such work

By Lee Billings | August 10, 2015 (excerpts)

“The emptiness of outer space might be the last place you’d expect militaries to vie over contested territory, except that outer space isn’t so empty anymore. About 1,300 active satellites wreath the globe in a crowded nest of orbits, providing worldwide communications, GPS navigation, weather forecasting and planetary surveillance. For militaries that rely on some of those satellites for modern warfare, space has become the ultimate high ground, with the U.S. as the undisputed king of the hill. Now, as China and Russia aggressively seek to challenge U.S. superiority in space with ambitious military space programs of their own, the power struggle risks sparking a conflict that could cripple the entire planet’s space-based infrastructure. And though it might begin in space, such a conflict could easily ignite full-blown war on Earth.

struggle risks sparking a conflict that could cripple the entire planet's space-based infrastructure. And though it might begin in space, such a conflict could easily ignite full-blown war on Earth.

The long-simmering tensions are now approaching a boiling point due to several events, including recent and ongoing tests of possible anti-satellite weapons by China and Russia, as well as last month's failure of tension-easing talks at the United Nations.

Testifying before Congress earlier this year, Director of National Intelligence James Clapper echoed the concerns held by many senior government officials about the growing threat to U.S. satellites, saying that China and Russia are both "developing capabilities to deny access in a conflict," such as those that might erupt over China's military activities in the South China Sea or Russia's in Ukraine. China in particular, Clapper said, has demonstrated "the need to interfere with, damage and destroy" U.S. satellites, referring to a series of Chinese anti-satellite missile tests that began in 2007.

There are many ways to disable or destroy satellites beyond provocatively blowing them up with missiles. A spacecraft could simply approach a satellite and spray paint over its optics, or manually snap off its communications antennas, or destabilize its orbit. Lasers can be used to temporarily disable or permanently damage a satellite's components, particularly its delicate sensors, and radio or microwaves can jam or hijack transmissions to or from ground controllers."

"...space-based surveillance became a crucial component of the Cold War, with satellites serving as one part of elaborate early-warning systems on alert for the deployment or launch of ground-based nuclear weapons. Throughout most of the Cold War, the U.S.S.R. developed and tested "space mines," self-detonating spacecraft that could seek and destroy U.S. spy satellites by peppering them with shrapnel. In the 1980s, the militarization of space peaked with the Reagan administration's multibillion-dollar Strategic Defense Initiative, dubbed Star Wars, to develop orbital countermeasures against Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles. And in 1985, the U.S. Air Force staged a clear demonstration of its formidable capabilities, when an F-15 fighter jet launched a missile that took out a failing U.S. satellite in low-Earth orbit."

"“This used to be a black program—something that didn't even officially exist,” Weeden says. “It was declassified to basically send a message saying, ‘Hey, if you're doing something funky in and around the geosynchronous belt, we're going to see.’” An interloper into geosynchronous orbit need not be an explosives-tipped missile to be a security risk—even sidling up to an adversary's strategic satellites is considered a threat. Which is one reason that potential U.S. adversaries might be alarmed by the rendezvous capabilities of GSSAP and of the U.S. Air Force's highly maneuverable X-37B robotic space planes.”

Now, from the Russian side:

<http://sputniknews.com/military/20150814/1025760955/russia-us-star-wars.html>

The Russian Defense Ministry has developed new technology to counter US battle stations in space, said Igor Nasenkov, the first deputy head of Russia's Radio-Electronic Technologies Concern (RETC), according to Russian media sources.

“If the United States starts developing and launching its battle stations into space, Russia will have to respond in kind — namely with the development of high-performance Electronic Warfare (EW) tools on different types of bases; the use of these tools will be a distinct advantage [for Russia],” Nasenkov said, as quoted by Rossiyskaya Gazeta.

Defense industry enterprises already have the necessary scientific and technological foundation, including layout models for future EW tools, the high-ranking RETC official said.

Defense industry enterprises already have the necessary scientific and technological foundation, including layout models for future EW tools, the high-ranking RETC official said.

All Russia needs right now is a political decision and appropriate funding to kick start the project, Nasenkov said.

Last week, US media reported about Washington's plans to militarize space, as in future conflicts between major superpowers Earth's orbit will become a new battlefield.

Laser-armed satellites, long-range anti-aircraft missiles and other deadly weapons of destruction would attack and destroy enemy orbital forces.

Now, for all you techno-geeks out there, here's 54 pages of descriptions, charts and depictions of space laser technology in a joint U.S. Air Force – Boeing patent:

You know damned well that if this is unclassified and available on the internet, it's outdated technology and something way more sophisticated is in use today, perhaps even with the capabilities to take out targets on earth.

Quote:

"In 1997, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Space, Keith R. Hall, said, "With regard to space dominance, we have it, we like it and we're going to keep it."

NASA's Project Blue Beam: Fake Alien Invasion

The infamous NASA [National Aeronautics and Space Administration] Blue Beam Project has four different steps in order to implement the new age religion with the Antichrist at its head. We must remember that the new age religion is the very foundation for the new world government, without which religion the dictatorship of the new world order is completely impossible. I'll repeat that: Without a universal belief in the new age religion, the success of the new world order will be impossible! That is why the Blue Beam Project is so important to them, but has been so well hidden until now.

Engineered Earthquakes & Hoaxed 'Discoveries' The first step in the NASA Blue Beam Project concerns the breakdown [re-evaluation] of all archaeological knowledge. It deals with the set-up, with artificially created earthquakes at certain precise locations on the planet, of supposedly new discoveries which will finally explain to all people the "error" of all fundamental religious doctrines. The falsification of this information will be used to make all nations believe that their religious doctrines have been misunderstood for centuries and misinterpreted. Psychological preparations for that first step have already been implemented with the film, '2001: A Space Odyssey;' the StarTrek series, and 'Independence Day;' all of which deal with invasions from space and the coming together of all nations to repel the invaders. The last films, 'Jurassic Park,' deals with the theories of evolution, and claim God's words are lies.

Hoaxed "Discoveries"

What is important to understand in the first step is that those earthquakes will hit at different parts of the world where scientific and archaeological teachings have indicated that arcane mysteries have been buried. By those types of earthquakes, it will be possible for scientists to rediscover those arcane mysteries which will be used to discredit all fundamental religious doctrines. This is the first preparation for the plan for humanity because what they want to do is destroy the beliefs of all Christians and Muslims on the planet. To do that, they need some false 'proof' from the far past that will prove to all nations that their religions have all been misinterpreted and misunderstood.

The Big Space Show in the Sky The second step in the NASA Blue Beam Project involves a gigantic 'space show' with three- dimensional optical holograms and sounds, laser projection of multiple holographic images to different parts of the world, each receiving a different image according to predominating regional national religious faith. This new 'god's' voice will be speaking in all languages. In order to understand that, we must study various secret services' research done in the last 25 years. The Soviet's have perfected an advanced computer, even exported them, and fed them with the minute physio-psychological particulars based on their studies of the anatomy and electromechanical composition of the human body, and the studies of the electrical, chemical and biological properties of the human brain.

These computers were fed, as well, with the languages of all human cultures and their meanings. The dialects of all cultures have been fed into the computers from satellite transmissions. The Soviets began to feed the computers with objective programs like the ones of the new messiah. It also seems that the Soviets – the new world order people – have resorted to suicidal methods with the human society by allocating electronic wavelengths for every person and every society and culture to induce suicidal thoughts if the person doesn't comply with the dictates of the new world order.

There are two different aspects of step two.

The first is the 'space show.' Where does the space show come from? The space show, the holographic images will be used in a simulation of the ending during which all nations will be shown scenes that will be the fulfillment of that which they desire to verify the prophecies and adversary events.

These will be projected from satellites onto the sodium layer about 60 miles above the earth. We see tests every once in a while, but they are called UFOs and "flying saucers" sightings.

The result of these deliberately staged events will be to show the world the new 'christ,' the new messiah, Matraia (Maitreya), for the immediate implementation of the new world religion. Enough truth will be foisted upon an unsuspecting world to hook them into the lie. "Even the most learned will be deceived."

The project has perfected the ability for some device [referred to as "tractor beams" by ufologists].to lift up an enormous number of people, as in a Rapture, and whisk the entire group into a never-never land We see tests of this device in the abduction of humans by those mysterious little alien greys who snatch people out of their beds and through windows into waiting "mother ships." The calculated resistance to the universal religion and the new messiah and the ensuing holy wars will result in the loss of human life on a scale never imagined before in all of human history.

The Blue Beam Project will pretend to be the universal fulfillment of the prophecies of old, as major an event as that which occurred 2,000 years ago. In principle, it will make use of the skies as a movie screen (on the sodium layer at about 60 miles) as space-based laser-generating satellites project simultaneous images to the four corners of the planet in every language and dialect according to the region. It deals with the religious aspect of the new world order and is deception and seduction on a massive scale.

Computers will coordinate the satellites and software already in place will run the sky show. Holographic images are based on nearly identical signals combining to produce an image or hologram with deep perspective which is equally applicable to acoustic ELF, VLF and LF waves and optical phenomena. Specifically, the show will consist of multiple holographic images to different parts of the world, each receiving a different image according to the specific national, regional religion. Not a single area will be excluded. With computer animation and sounds appearing to emanate from the very depths of space, astonished ardent followers of the various creeds will witness their own returned messiahs in convincing lifelike reality.

Then the projections of Jesus, Mohammed, Buddha, Krishna, etc., will merge into one after correct explanations of the mysteries and revelations will have been disclosed. This one god will, in fact, be the Antichrist, who will explain that the various scriptures have been misunderstood and misinterpreted, and that the religions of old are responsible for turning brother against brother, and nation against nation, therefore old religions must be abolished to make way for the new age new world religion, representing the one god Antichrist they see before them.

Naturally, this superbly staged falsification will result in dissolved social and religious disorder on a grand scale, each nation blaming the other for the deception, setting loose millions of programmed religious fanatics through demonic possession on a scale never witnessed before. In addition, this event will occur at a time of profound worldwide political anarchy and general tumult created by some worldwide catastrophe. The United Nation even now plans to use Beethoven's 'Song of Joy' as the anthem for the introduction for the new age one world religion.

If we put this space show in parallel with the star wars program we get this: combination of electromagnetic radiation and hypnosis which have also been the subject of intensive research. In 1974, for instance, researcher G. F. Shapits, said of one of the research proposals that, '...in this investigation it will be shown that the spoken words of the hypnotist may also be converted by electromagnetic energy directly and to the subconscious part of the human brain without employing any mechanical device for receiving or transcoding the message, and without the person exposed to such influence having a chance to control the information input consciously. It may be expected that the rationalized behavior will be considered to have been taken out of their own free will.'

Anyone investigating so-called 'channelling' phenomena right now would be wise to take this area of research into consideration. It will be noted that those who think of themselves as 'channellers' has escalated rapidly since this type of research was conducted. It is uncanny how similar their messages are, despite which entity they claim to be their source of divine guidance. It would suggest any individual considering the credibility of channelled information should be discerning and critically evaluate where the message they are receiving originates, and if the messages are specifically beneficial to the new world order.

The Sydney Morning newspaper published an item on March 21st, 1983 which announced that the Soviets were invading the human mind, the article having been submitted to the foreign editor by Doctor Nathan Abnuengy, assistant professor in the faculty of agriculture in Asia. It is worth quoting the article at length even though his grammar is a little old. This article relates to the Soviets who created the supercomputer we were discussing earlier and which is really important because these types of computers can be run through satellites and through space.

The computers were fed with all the different languages and their meanings, the dialect of all peoples were fed to the computers with objective programs. But we are no longer talking about the Soviets; we are talking about the United Nations, the minions of the new world order, who are feeding the computers with the necessary information.

The editor of the column in which the article appeared even states that the piece made points too important to ignore. I think it is possible that the persons who have created this mega-mind- control-program could sell the software to an organization and not be aware that the client might use the program and data to enslave all of humankind. Just imagine how far they have advanced since that article was published!

Artificial Thought & Communication The advancement of techniques propel us toward the third step in the Blue Beam Project that goes along with the telepathic and electronically augmented two-way communication where ELF, VLF and LF waves will reach each person from within his or her own mind, convincing each of them that their own god is speaking to them from the very depths of their own soul. Such rays from satellites are fed from the memories of computers that have stored massive data about every human on earth, and their languages. The rays will then interlace with their natural thinking to form what we call diffuse artificial thought.

That kind of technology goes into the 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s research where the human brain has been compared to a computer. Information is fed in, processed, integrated and then a response is formulated and acted upon. Mind controllers manipulate information the same way a computer for grammar manipulates information. In January 1991, the University of Arizona hosted a conference entitled, 'The NATO Advanced Research Workshop on Current and Emergent Phenomena and Biomolecular Systems.' What does that mean exactly? It means this: We refer to one paper that was delivered at the conference which stands out for its different attitude towards the development under discussion at that time. It was, in effect, a protest and chilling warning to the attending scientists about the potential abuse of their research findings.

Their findings, of course, stated that the United States has already developed communications equipment which can make the blind see, the deaf hear and the lame walk. It can relieve the terminally ill from pain without the use of drugs or surgery. I'm not talking about science fiction. A man might retain the use of all his faculties right up to the moment of his death. This communications equipment depends upon a completely new way of looking at the human brain and neuromuscular systems and radiation pulses at ultra-low frequencies. Some of this equipment is now operational within the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), and Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). It will never be used to make the blind see, the deaf hear and the lame walk because it is central to the domestic political agenda and foreign policy of George Bush and his puppet-masters of the new world order.

Domestically, the new communications equipment is being used to torture and murder persons who match profiles imagined to be able to screen a given population for terrorists; to torture and murder citizens who belong to organizations which promote tolerance and peace and development in Central America; to torture and murder citizens who belong to organizations who oppose the development and deployment of nuclear weapons, and to create a race of slave cult automatons, or what is popularly called 'the Manchurian Candidates.' Overseas experimentation is taking place on hostages held by the United States and Canada, Great Britain, Australia, Germany, Finland and France. Additionally, there has been a long series of bizarre suicides among British computer scientists, all of whom have had some connection to the United States Navy.

What is possible to ask before such a psychology of terror is this: would any government, corporation or psychiatrist wilfully promote such horror today? The answer is quite obviously, 'Yes.'

Government agencies and the corporations that work with them toward a new world order are prepared to promote anything that will help them achieve their objective of total social control. As for the question of why: For one thing, if you terrify the public and make them fear for their safety, they will allow you to implement draconian law enforcement practice, disarm them and keep extensive records on them, and they only have to tell you that it is all to protect you, of course. Secondly, it promotes the decay of the present democratic forms of political systems, and leads societies to search for alternative methods of political ideology.

Of course, the alternative has already been planned.

It is called the New World Order and it will not have your safety or interests at heart. As George Bush said: 'Read my lips.' Fear has always been used by powerful elite to control and subjugate the masses.

The old maxim, 'divide and conquer', is being played out to the limit worldwide to ensure that everyone is frightened for their personal safety, and to be suspicious of everyone else. This, too, is mind-control. To go further in regard to the new technology which is at the base of the NASA Blue Beam Project, we have to consider this statement by psychologist James V. McConnell which was published in a 1970s issue of Psychology Today.

He said, 'The day has come when we can combine sensory deprivation with drug hypnosis and astute manipulation of reward and punishment to gain almost absolute control over an individual's behavior. It should then be possible to achieve a very rapid and highly effective type of positive brainwashing that would allow us to make dramatic changes in a person's behavior and personality.'

Now, when we talked before about that kind of ray and the telepathic and electronically augmented communication, the kind of rays that are fed from the memories of computers which store massive data about humans, human language and dialects, and we said that the people will be reached from within, making each person to believe that his own god is speaking directly from within his or her own soul, we refer to that kind of technology and that kind of thinking that same psychologist was espousing, that is: we should be trained from birth that we should all do what society wants us to do rather than what we want to do for ourselves; that because they have the technology to do it, no one should now be allowed to have their own individual personality. \

This statement and these ideas are important because it is the basic teaching of the United Nations that no one owns his or her own personality. And that same psychologist claims that no one has any say-so about the kind of personality they acquire and there is no reason to believe you have the right to refuse to acquire a new personality if your old personality is considered 'antisocial.'

What is important in this declaration is that the new world order will be set up over the current system, meaning the old way of thinking and behavior and religion will be considered the 'old' and incorrect way of thinking and that they can change it at one of the eradication camps of the United Nations to make sure that anyone with this 'antisocial' behavior will be disposed of quickly so that other modified individuals will be able to fulfill the needs and agendas of the new world order without being distracted by the truth.

Could this be the greatest mind control project ever?

The NASA Blue Beam Project is the prime directive for the new world order's absolute control over the populations of the entire earth. I would suggest you investigate this information carefully before dismissing it as fanatic lunacy. If we go further in the different reports we have presented, we find that the mind-control operations and technology include a transmitter that broadcasts at the same frequency as the human nervous-system, which transmitter is manufactured by the Loral Electro-Optical System in Pasadena, California. Loral, a major defense contractor, has previously conducted research on directed energy weapons for Lt. Gen. Leonard Perez of the U. S. Air Force who was searching for a weapon that could implant messages into the minds of the enemy while urging his own troops on to superhuman deeds of valor! The device employs electromagnetic radiation of gigahertz frequencies [microwaves] pulsed at extremely low frequencies (ELF).

It is used to torture people both physically and mentally from a distance.

Weapons of this type are thought to have been used against a British woman protesting the presence of American Cruise Missiles at Greenham Common Airbase during the 1970s. This weapon can be used to induce total sensory deprivation by broadcasting signals into the auditory nerve at such high power that it blocks the ability of the individual to hear themselves think!

The process employed by such ELF technology are described in various U. S. Defense Department publications, including one entitled, 'The Electromagnetic Spectrum and Low Intensity Conflict,' by Captain Paul E. Tyler, Medical Commandant, U. S. Navy, which is included in a collection entitled, 'Low Intensity Conflict and Modern Technology Edict,' by Lt. Col David G. Dean, USAF. The paper was delivered in 1984 and the collection published 1986 by Air University Press, Maxwell Airforce Base, Alabama. Another pulse microwave device can deliver audible signals directly to an individual while remaining undetectable to anyone else. The technology is very simple and can be built by using an ordinary police radar gun. The microwave beam generated by the device is modulated at audio frequencies and can broadcast messages directly into the brain. Now here we come to the NASA Blue Beam Project. The broadcasting of subliminal two-way communication and images from the depths of space correspond directly to that kind of technology.

In his book, 'The Body Electric,' Nobel Prize nominee Dr. Robert O. Becker describes a series of experiments conducted in the early 1960s by Allen Frie where this phenomena was demonstrated as well as later experiments conducted in 1973 at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research by Dr. Joseph C. Sharp who personally underwent tests in which he proved he could hear and understand messages delivered to him in an echo-free isolation chamber via a pulsed microwave audiogram which is an analog of the word's sound vibration beamed into his brain. Becker then goes on to state, 'Such a device has obvious application for covert operations designed to drive a target crazy with unknown voices or deliver undetectable instructions to a programmed assassin.'

Now figure out when we hear that voice from the new world messiah who would be speaking from space to all of the sane (?) people of the earth who might give instructions to zealots and religious fanatics, we would see hysteria and social mayhem on a scale never witnessed before on this planet. No police forces in the world, even as a combined front, could deal with the disorder that will follow! A 1978 book entitled, 'Microwave Auditory Effect and Application,' by James C. Lynn describes how audible voices can be broadcast directly into the brain.

This technology could actually allow the blind to see and the deaf to hear. Instead, it has been turned into a weapon to enslave the world.

Allen Frie also reports that he could speed up, slow down or stop the hearts of isolated frogs by synchronizing the pulsed rate of a microwave beam with the heart itself. According to Dr. Robert Becker, similar results have been obtained using live frogs, which shows that it is technically feasible to produce heart attacks with rays designed to penetrate the human chest.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Both the author of this report and his colleague died of 'heart attacks' only days apart. I should mention also that Dr. Becker does NOT participate in such research.]

It has been demonstrated that focused ultra high frequency UHF electromagnetic energy beams can be used to induce considerable agitation and muscular activity or induce muscular weakness and lethargy. Microwaves can also be used to burn human skin and aid the effect of drugs, bacteria and poisons or affect the function of the entire brain. These effects were all revealed at length by the CIA on September 21, 1977 in testimony before the Subcommittee on Health and Scientific Research. Dr. Sidney Gottlieb who directed the MK-Ultra program at that time was forced to discuss the scope of the CIA's research to find techniques of activation of the human organism by remote electronic means. So this is something that exists right now, that has been pursued to its highest degree, that can be used from space to reach any person, anyplace on the face of the earth.

If we go deeper in that process of mind control over the people we find that the equipment and technology has been used to influence politics in a much more direct fashion. Michael Dukakis, the Democrat candidate running against George Bush in the 1988 election was targeted with microwave technology in order to impede his public speaking performance once the public opinion polls showed he posed a serious threat to Bush's election prospects. He also claims that the equipment was used against Kitty Dukakis and drove her to the brink of suicide. In the Disneyland world of U. S. politics, a presidential candidate with problems such as these, would obviously lose their race to the White House. In the December 1980 edition of the U. S. Army Journal, called the Military Review, a column by Lt. Col John B. Alexander, entitled, 'The New Mental Battlefield: Beam Me Up, Spock,' provides further insight into the technical capabilities at the disposal of the comptroller.

He writes: "Several examples will demonstrate areas in which progress have been made. The transference of energy from one organism to another; the ability to heal or cause disease to be transmitted over a distance, thus inducing illness or death from no apparent cause; telepathic behavior modification which includes the ability to induce hypnotic states up to a distance of 1,000 kilometers have been reported.

The use of telepathic hypnosis also holds great potential. This capability could allow agents to be deeply planted with no conscious knowledge of their programming. In movie terms, the Manchurian Candidate lives, and does not even require a telephone call. 'Other mind-to-mind induction techniques are being considered. If perfected this capability could allow the direct transference of thought via telepathy from one mind or group of minds to a select target audience. The unique factor is that the recipient will not be aware that thought has been implanted from an external source. He or she will believe the thoughts are original."

This is exactly what we were talking about. The third step in the NASA Blue Beam Project is called the Telepathic Electronic Two-Way

Communication. Lt. Col John Alexander's article continues:

"If it is possible to feed artificial thought into the multigenic field via satellite, the mind control of the entire planet is now possible. An individual's only resistance would be to constantly question the motivation behind their thoughts and not act upon thoughts which they consider to be outside their own ideological, religious and moral boundaries."

Once again, it is wise to consider how television, advertising, modern education and various types of social pressure are used to manipulate those boundaries. It has been reported by Lt. Col Alexander who said, in the summary of his Military Review article,

'The information on those kinds of technologies presented here would be considered by some to be ridiculous since it does not conform to their view of reality. But some people still believe the world is flat.'

Now, this means a lot, because if people do not believe this kind of technology is possible, or that it is science fiction, those people put themselves in great jeopardy, because on the night when those thousand stars will shine from space, during the night when the new messiah will be presented to the world, they will not be prepared and will have no time to prepare to save themselves against that kind of technology. They don't believe and they won't take time to prepare.

(This is exactly what happens to people who are convinced by Satan into believing that he doesn't exist, so they have no defence against him. – JAH.)

Universal Supernatural Manifestations via Electronics – The fourth step concerns the universal supernatural manifestation with electronic means. It contains three different orientations.

One is to make mankind believe that an alien (off-world) invasion is about to occur at every major city on earth in order to provoke each major nation to use its nuclear weapons in order to strike back. This way, the United Nations Court will require that all those nations which launched nuclear weapons to disarm when the invasion is shown to have been false. And how will the United Nations know that the invasion was false? They will have staged it, of course.

The second is to make the Christians believe that the Rapture is going to occur with the supposed divine intervention of an alien (off-world) civilization coming to rescue earthlings from a savage and merciless demon. Its goal will be to dispose of all significant opposition to the implementation of the New World Order in one major stroke, actually within hours of the beginning of the sky show!

The third orientation in the fourth step is a mixture of electronic and supernatural forces. The waves used at that time will allow "supernatural forces" to travel through optical fibers, coaxial cables (TV) electrical and phone lines in order to penetrate to everyone at once through major appliances. Embedded chips will already be in place. The goal of this deals with global Satanic ghosts projected all around the world in order to push all populations to the edge of hysteria and madness, to drown them into a wave of suicide, murder and permanent psychological disorders. After the Night of the Thousand Stars, worldwide populations will be ready for the new messiah to re-establish order and peace at any cost, even at the cost of abdication of freedom.

Phasing Out Cash & Independence The techniques used in the fourth step is exactly the same used in the past in the USSR to force the people to accept Communism. The same technique will be used by the United Nations to implement the new world religion and the new world order. A lot of people ask when this is going to happen and how they will accomplish the visions of the Night of a Thousand Stars, and the events that will point to the days when it will begin.

According to the many reports we have received, we believe it will begin with some kind of worldwide economic disaster. Not a complete crash, but enough to allow them to introduce some kind of in-between currency before they introduce their electronic cash to replace all paper or plastic money. The in-between currency will be used to force anyone with savings to spend or turn in their cash because they understand that people who have money and are not dependent upon them might be the very ones who will mount an insurrection against them. If everyone is broke, no one can fund a war of any kind: paper currency will cease to exist. This is one of the first signs.

But to implement the worldwide electronic money system, everyone in the world who might have money in the future, will have to have a way to transfer money electronically. Before that time, everyone will have spent, before the year 2,000, all of their cash, reserves and assets. Everyone has to be 100% dependent upon the Council for their existence. To prevent any kind of independence, the new world order has already implanted micro chips in wild animals, birds, fish, etc. Why? They want to make certain that the people who will not accept the New World Order will not be able to hunt or fish anywhere in the world. If they try, they will be tracked and traced by satellites, then hunted down and imprisoned or killed.

The new world order is already changing the laws of all nations to make everyone dependent upon a single food and vitamin supply. They are changing laws about religion and psychiatric disorders in order to identify anyone who is potentially threatening to the NWO. Those who are found defective will be sent to eradication camps where their organs will be taken and sold to the highest bidders. Those who are not killed outright will be used as slave labor or used in medical experiments. The goal of a dictatorship is to control everyone, everywhere on the planet, ruthlessly and without exception. That's why the new technology being introduced everywhere is a technology for the control of the people. The technology of the 1940s and 1950s was used to help the people have an easier and more productive life.

The new technology is designed and built to track down and control people everywhere. This technology is being manufactured for a specific purpose and to refuse to see and recognize that purpose, which is to enslave the entire populations of the world, is to deny the emergence of the Antichrist and the establishment of the new world order religion and government. If you cannot see, if you cannot learn, if you cannot understand, then you and your family and friends will succumb to the fires of the crematoria that have been built in every state and every major city on earth, built to deal with you. No one is safe in a totalitarian police state!
